
SETTING YOUR PET RABBIT LOOSE DOESN'T MAKE HER "FREE!"

IT MAKES HER "FOOD!"

photo © Mary E. Cotter, 2002

Domestic rabbits lack the survival instincts wild rabbits use to fend for themselves. So they become food for everything from raccoons and dogs to crows and hawks. And the "lucky" ones who don't get eaten get run over by cars or die from heat or disease. Please, before getting a bunny – or abandoning one – visit www.rabbit.org